Ageing or aging (see spelling differences) is the process of becoming older. The term refers especially to human beings, many animals, and fungi, whereas for example bacteria, perennial plants and some simple animals are potentially biologically immortal. In the broader sense, ageing can refer to single cells within an organism which have ceased dividing (cellular senescence) or to the ...

The free radical theory of aging (FRTA) states that organisms age because cells accumulate free radical damage over time. A free radical is any atom or molecule that has a single unpaired electron in an outer shell. While a few free radicals such as melanin are not chemically reactive, most biologically relevant free radicals are highly reactive. For most biological structures, free radical ...

2. Age-related changes in adipose tissue composition and function
2.1. Fat redistribution with aging. Through middle- or early old age (e.g., 40–65 years of age), body mass and body fat percentage increase in both men and women (Guo et al., 1999). This age-related increase in adiposity has been suggested to underlie reduced insulin sensitivity with age (Karakelides et al., 2010).

Aging and adipose tissue: potential interventions for

Share your own feelings and reassure the parent that you will support them and help them solve their problems.; Help the parent to retain whatever control is possible in making his or her own decisions. Respect and try to honor their wishes wherever feasible. Encourage the smallest change possible at each step so that the parent is more able to adjust to the change.
